

Heading home

Another long day of flying, this time due to weather issues, not distance. SF to San Diego really isn't that far! Fortunately, even though I only had three hours in San Diego, it was enough time to take a cab out to the Trek store in San Diego, one of the better-run shops in the country. Took lots of photos and got some good ideas for rearranging things a bit. Final flight will be an hour late getting home, but all things considered, that's not too bad. Ok, final flight was about an hour and a half late, so I'm heading home on pretty much the last train, arriving in Redwood City about 11:30pm and having to try and get to sleep quickly so I can ride in the morning. At least I'm getting home the same day I left. And maybe it won't be raining tomorrow morning!