

Yes, we'll be there (Mount Hamilton New Year's morning)

Normally I would have promoted the annual New Year's Day ride up Mount Hamilton beforehand, but given the questionable weather, I figured it would be better not to encourage others to be as silly as some of us. Thankfully, the weather may not be as bad as initially forecast; right now weather.com says rain turning to showers (showers timed nicely for the descent), while the TV people believe that the rain will have passed through before we even start. In this case, I like the TV people better! Whatever, my son and I will be heading up the hill at 9am, getting to the top a bit over two hours later. Look here for photos later on that afternoon or evening. --Mike--