

No leg warmers today!

It was warm when we got up and even warmer at the top of this-morning's ride. Very large group, too many to name, especially since I got delayed in reporting back after a (literally) hot & hectic day at the shop, followed by getting to babysit a few malcontent computers in our Los Altos store late this evening. I'll try to get something detailed up on Wednesday, but for the meantime I can tell you it was very very fast for the first third of the climb, making me sure Kevin was either going to blow up or end up with 27-something, but of course the third option, having a seizure, was what happened. No biggie, just wrecked the time, great ride anyway. --Mike--