

Yes, days behind in updates here!

As Summer kicks in (even though it's not technically Summer) things get a whole lot busier at the shop, plus the family stuff going on, and somehow the almost-daily diary ends up without being updated. So a brief recap-

Thursday-morning's ride, up through the park, was on the slow side, and up on top it was pretty dreary. One of those foggy summer mornings that trash your bike but put things in quite literally a very different and very beautiful light.

The good news is that Kevin's finally done with his series of brain surgeries, and arrived home on Thursday. By Saturday he was able to get back to work, showing off a rather magnificent scar that circumnavigates most of his head. Quite impressive really!

More after Sunday's ride. --MikeJ