

A bit on the colder side, a bit smoky, but still feels nice to ride

Two days on West Old LaHonda Tuesday was a bit of a surprise; we had an actual group, not just myself and Kevin (son). Riding with us was Kevin (pilot) and JR. Not fast, just going through the motions, riding like it was winter. But maybe it was? 35 degrees in Woodside. Warmed up as we rode up the hill, and a balmy 45 on Skyline!

Since we'd been riding pretty easy, I actually took the lead heading west on 84 towards West Old LaHonda. A rare thing, but helped to stay warm.

Thursday... still cold! But at least our power was back on when I got home. Which also meant being able to make coffee before the ride! Just myself and Kevin (son), and just as slow as Tuesday. Definitely riding slower in the cold, no question. Just a few weeks ago we didn't need leg warmers; now, it's all about picking the right gloves. Hate that!
