

Windy Sunday!

Finally a good cookie face test moment in Pescadero! Getting there required a slightly different game plan, with the crazy winds from the north dictating a counter-clockwise direction so we could head south on Stage Road. Kevin did a great job pulling from LaHonda to San Gregorio, 100% without help from me. The kid is strong even when he hasn't been riding much. Of course the problem with counter-clockwise is climbing Haskins from the tougher side. Not something we do very often, unless planning to head up West Alpine, and that wasn't in the cards. Maybe when it warms up a bit.
