

Three days on WOLH

Had to happen sometime; our string of amazing weather came to an end. Got a chance to try out the rainbikes in weather that wasn't too challenging. Just light drizzle and not too cold (upper-40s). REALLY slow slog up Old LaHonda, but nobody else out there to make fun of us. We saw maybe 10 others out on the road though. The original plan hadn't included a ride up to Skyline, as I was thinking we should put the rain bikes to a milder test first, maybe heading down to Los Altos & back, but Kevin wasn't having any of that. Too bad; I wanted to see if our old Los Altos location was still empty.

Last Thursday was a beautiful morning, although Kevin still wasn't on top of his game, this time developing quite a nose bleed on Kings. Kevin (former pilot) and Karen showed up too! 4 is a big group for wintertime; most head out later when it's a bit warmer.

Tuesday's ride was just the two of us (myself and younger Kevin). Just another nice, and still slow, day on a bike.
