

Usual Sunday ride shortened by sale

The usual Sunday ride is at least 60 miles, usually with my son, heading out to the coast or some sort of convoluted loop involving West Alpine that doesn't quite make it all the way out to land's end. But today our Redwood City store was open from noon-5pm for our big Spring sale, so the best we could get in was a pretty-darned-short 28 miler, heading up Kings Mtn, north on Skyline to 92, down to Canada Road & back. Not very challenging, but a good use of the few hours before opening up the store for what turned out to be a very successful day of sales.
