

It's that time of year again (Trade Show in Las Vegas)

Wednesday will be my first day at "the show" but the real work was today (Tuesday) when, instead of getting to do the usual Tuesday/Thursday-morning ride, I was in NBDA (National Bicycle Dealer Association) meetings dealing with nothing at all important, just things having to do with whether small businesses in this country have a shot at survival and what role internet sales should play vs our "brick & mortar" investment (selling to real live people out of a real live building).

But first, I was treated to a pretty wild lightning storm, with a great view from the 33rd floor of Circus Circus (yeah, real high-rent digs) at 2:30am! Pictures soon.