

Will I see the cherry blossoms in DC?

Two very long days down (and that's not counting a travel day getting here), two more to go! The first two were spent in board meetings for the National Bicycle Dealer Association, our industry's attempt to improve the quality of bicycle retailers to ensure our survival in a world that gets tougher for business every day.

The next two are designed to improve conditions for our customers, although with the current climate here in DC, status quo will be considered a victory.

It is Washington DC though, and what would a trip to DC be without a sighting of the President? I'll let you know when that happens because for now all I've got are shots of two cars with darkened windows and no idea which he was in. --Mike--Location: W Virginia Ave, Bethesda, United States
