

Have we seen the end of rain?

Let's hope today was the last ride for my rain bike in a while. The original forecast had been encouraging, meaning, no rain this (Thursday) morning! Yeah! But woke up to really wet streets. Boo. But at least the lack of rain encouraged a few others to get out there; it was the first morning ride in a while that we've seen maybe 5 or 6 other cyclists!

Cold, yes. Slow, oh geez yes. Can't wait for it to get nicer. Upper-30s most of the ride. We were dressed comfortably but descending in the cold isn't much fun. Nor is it as much fun riding the heavier rain bikes, but thank goodness for disc brakes!

The real shock is the new weather forecast. Up to 15 days with no rain in sight.